WORLD AFFAIRS COUNCIL
WASHINGTON, DC

Climate Change: Whose World is it?

Scholars to Leaders 2016

World Affairs Council of Washington, DC

Mary 19, 2016

Looking for a meaningful engagement with students after History and Government AP exams? Register for the free Scholars to Leaders web series to join in this live- stream interactive program. Classrooms can virtually participate in debates, discussions, and complete online challenges to explore the theme, Narratives of Identity: Us and Them.

What's the difference between climate change and global warming? How does this impact me? Am I responsible? Be a part of the growing dialogue and join the World Affairs Council of Washington, DC at Mount Vernon on May 19th as we discuss, debate, and collaborate on climate change, the world, history, and where you fit in.

So often our focus narrows to present challenges affecting our global world only touching on milestones of the past. Through Climate Change: Whose World is it; we challenge you to expand your lens—exploring climate changes of the past and present by investigating the world as it is now and how it was millions of years ago and how you can impact the future.

During the program, you will hear from a variety of experts from academic and professional fields as they discuss the history of our worlds changing climate and how you can make a difference. You will also engage in discussions and debates with students and teachers across the country from both our virtual and in-house studio audience. Most importantly, you will reflect on what you already know and be challenged to think outside of the present.